City Councilman Jumaane Williams cruised to an easy victory in Tuesday's special election to become New York City's next public advocate. 4

TO KNOW

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

When I headed to my polling place on Tuesday, it was pretty empty, but I still thought it my civic duty to vote in the special election for New York City public advocate. And so did more than 277,000 other New Yorkers — a small fraction of the city's electorate, but still enough to name City Council Member Jumaane Williams as the next public advocate. Williams won with about 33 percent of the vote, out of 17 total candidates on the ballot, but he's only guaranteed the position until the end of the year. Read more about why, and all the details of the election, inside and at metro.us.

WELCOME TO METRO.USUnivision team detained, deported from Venezuela

1 Venezuela on Tuesday deported a team from U.S. television network Univision after anchor Jorge Ramos said authorities detained them at the presidential palace because President Nicolas Maduro was upset by their interview questions. The six-person team was held for more than two hours and had their equipment confiscated, Ramos told reporters on Monday evening after arriving back at his Caracas hotel, which was surrounded by intelligence agents. Ramos and his team left the hotel on Tuesday morning guarded by personnel from the U.S. and Mexican embassies while intelligence agents escorted them to Caracas' Maiquetia airport. They left on a midday flight to Miami, according to Reuters witnesses. "They didn't give us a reason" for the deportation, Ramos told reporters as he arrived at the terminal.

House passes bill rejecting border wall emergency

2 In a stinging rebuke to President Donald Trump, the House of Representatives on Tuesday brushed aside veto threats and passed legislation to terminate the emergency he declared at the U.S.-Mexico border in order to build a wall there. By a vote of 245-182, the House passed the resolution, setting up a vote in the Republican-controlled Senate where the resolution's chances were slimmer, but seemed to be improving. While passage was a victory for Democratic House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, the tally was short of what she would likely need to override a possible veto by Republican Trump. Only 13 Republicans supported the move to stop the president's declaration. During floor debate, Democratic Rep. Joaquin Castro, the main sponsor of the controversial legislation, said, "There is no emergency at the border," adding, "Border crossings are at a four-decades low."

A bell tolled at the memorial plaza to mark the moment when a truck bomb exploded in an underground garage 26 years ago, killing six people and injuring over 1,000. Family, friends and other mourners attended the afternoon service.

Top strategists split from Bernie Sanders' 2020 run

4 Three of the top media strategists for Democratic presidential contender Bernie Sanders stepped away from his 2020 campaign on Tuesday, citing creative differences over their vision for his fledgling White House run. Prominent consultants Tad Devine, Mark Longabaugh and Julian Mulvey, who played leading roles in Sanders' insurgent 2016 presidential campaign, said they would not work on the Vermont senator's 2020 bid for the Democratic nomination, which was launched last week. "We are leaving because we believe that Senator Sanders deserves to have media consultants who share his creative vision for the campaign," the three said in a joint statement. The three are partners in a media consulting firm that produced 275 television, radio and digital ads for the Sanders campaign in the 2016 race.

Travel ban denied tens of thousands more US visas

5 The U.S. State Department refused more than 37,000 visa applications in 2018 due to the Trump administration's travel ban, up from fewer than 1,000 the previous year when the ban had not fully taken effect, according to agency data released on Tuesday. The United States denies nearly 4 million visa applications a year for a variety of reasons, including for practicing polygamy, abducting children or simply not qualifying for the visa in question. The data released Tuesday was the first comprehensive look at the human impact of Republican President Donald Trump's ban, imposed shortly after he took office and initially blocked by federal courts. The ban has especially affected people from Iran, Libya, Somalia, Syria and Yemen, countries where the number of visas issued slid 80 percent in 2018 from 2016, the last year without a travel ban.

Jumaane Williams wins NYC public advocate election

New Yorkers picked their next public advocate after heading to the polls on Tuesday.

kristin.toussaint@metro.us

It's official: Jumaane Williams is the next New York City public advocate — at least until the end of this year.

Williams won Tuesday's special election for public advocate with more than 32 percent of the vote when 75 percent of polls were reporting, according to the Board of Elections, emerging as the winner out of 17 names that appeared on voters' ballots.

Williams has served on the New York City Council, representing the 45th District in Brooklyn since 2009, and previously ran for lieutenant governor of New York state as Cynthia Nixon's running mate. Now, Williams takes over as public advocate, relieving City Council Speaker Corey Johnson of his interim duties handling both roles.

Behind Williams was the lone Republican in the race, Eric Ulrich, with about 19 percent of the vote, and behind him was Melissa Mark-Viverito with more than 1 percent of the vote.

So what is the role of public advocate, anyway? It's a political position that's been around only since 1993 and is meant to serve as a watchdog for city government. The public advocate is the ombudsman for the five boroughs, investigating complaints of city services and agencies, and can introduce and co-sponsor legislation in the City Council, though cannot cast a vote on the Council.

Williams ran on the "It's Time Let's Go" ballot line and said he would infuse the position with his history of activism to focus on safe and affordable public housing, criminal justice reform, standing up to ICE and more.

Breaking news right before Election Day brought an old arrest of Williams' to light. Though Williams has been arrested many times, often for his activism, this arrest concerned a 2009 incident involving a "verbal disagreement" between Williams and his then-girlfriend.

Public advocate candidates Mark-Viverito and Nomiki Konst held a joint press conference to call attention to the old arrest, but it didn't seem to slow down Williams' roll. He was called a frontrunner throughout the race and also outspent the other candidates on his race, according to Feb. 11 data from the New York City Campaign Finance Board.

Voter turnout was expected to be among the lowest in city history for this special election, and that rang true at multiple polling places.

According to Board of Elections results, more than 277,000 New Yorkers cast their vote on Tuesday — about 11 percent of the total New York City electorate.

Avenue in Brooklyn, poll workers said about 300 people had voted by 6 p.m., which was low compared to previous elections. Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer told The New York Times that by the time she gets to the polls in the morning, about 100 people have usually voted before her. On Tuesday, it was only 28.

Metro-North announces start of New Haven line service between Bronx and Manhattan

NYC passengers can soon board at Fordham in the Bronx to head into Manhattan on Metro-North trains.

kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Trains on the Metro-North New Haven line will soon travel between Fordham and Manhattan, the MTA announced this week, marking a change in what was previously called “exclusionary” transit in the Bronx.

Fordham has been a “discharge only” stop for decades, allowing passengers coming from the suburbs in Westchester County and Connecticut to get off the train there, but barring anyone who needs to head to Manhattan from boarding at that station. Passengers who want to board at Fordham to go toward Grand Central have been forced to instead take Harlem line Metro-North trains.

Outbound Metro-North New Haven line trains do stop at the Fordham station to allow for travel to Westchester County and Connecticut, thus only allowing passengers to travel north from that station, not south into the city.

But beginning Sunday, April 14, inbound Metro-North New Haven line trains will travel between Fordham and Manhattan.

This means passengers will have access to 94 weekday Metro-North trains traveling between Fordham and Manhattan that had “previously been off-limits,” per the MTA. On Saturdays, 67 New Haven line trains will now be available for that travel, and 65 will be available on Sundays.

“The rule about boarding at Fordham had a long history, but that’s no reason for us to continue to uphold it,” said Metro-North Railroad President Catherine Rinaldi in a statement. “In fact, it was long past time for this antiquated and customer-unfriendly rule to be eliminated.”

Rinaldi worked with the MTA and the Connecticut Department of Transportation to bring about the change, but it was Comptroller Scott M. Stringer who shed a light on the issue back in October 2018.

“For more than a century, New Haven line trains have utterly neglected Bronx and Harlem residents — allowing riders from Connecticut and Westchester suburbs to disembark in the city, but refusing service to local New Yorkers,” Stringer said in a statement following the Metro-North news.

With the new service, revenue from train ticket sales between Fordham and Manhattan will be split between Metro-North and the state of Connecticut, officials said.

Stringer commended the MTA, Metro-North and Connecticut DOT for the change, saying that it marks “an important first step towards addressing and reversing these discriminatory practices,” but he’s still demanding more in terms of transit equity for Bronx residents.

The new Metro-North service between Fordham and Manhattan is possible, according to the MTA, because of a recently completed $15.1 million renewal of the Fordham station, which allowed for a new entrance to be built at Webster Avenue and East 193rd Street, among other upgrades.

Cuomo, de Blasio announce 10-point plan to fix MTA

The plan will use congestion pricing funds to help pay for MTA repairs.

lenyon.whitaker@metro.us

Mayor Bill de Blasio and Gov. Andrew Cuomo announced a new plan Tuesday to fix the MTA system, which serves 8.5 million customers daily.

If the 10-point proposal plan is approved, it will use funds generated from electronic tolling devices that would be installed in NYC's Central Business District, which includes streets south of 61st Street. According to the New York City Mayor's Office, the money from the city's traffic congestion charge will be placed in a "lockbox" and will be used to fund various repairs and improve the MTA.

In addition to using the funds generated from the tolling devices to help repair the MTA, a percentage of funds generated from the "cannabis excise tax" will also help pay for repairs to the city's

"This crisis runs deeper than ever before, and it's now clear there is no way to address it without congestion pricing and other dedicated revenue streams. The time to act is now."

Mayor Bill de Blasio

transit system.

According to the Mayor's Office, the plan also includes a measure that would limit MTA fare increases to no more than 2 percent per year.

"Working New Yorkers struggle every day to get around our city," de Blasio said in a statement Tuesday. "We cannot let another year pass without action that makes people's lives easier. This crisis runs deeper than ever before, and it's now clear there is no way to address it without congestion pricing and other dedicated revenue streams. The time to act is now."

MTA Acting Chair Fernando Ferrer released a statement following the announcement in support of the mayor and governor's plan to repair the transit system.

"I strongly endorse this proposal from Gov. Cuomo and Mayor de Blasio that addresses the fundamental challenges the MTA faces — a need for organization-wide reform, cost-cutting, additional revenues, and increased efficiency," Ferrer said. "This proposal is a holistic cure for much of what ails the MTA, and I hope to see it enacted swiftly for the benefit of our 8.5 million daily customers," he added.

Trump's ex-fixer Cohen to give new Russia details to Congress

Cohen is set to offer lawmakers new info about Trump's private affairs.

President Donald Trump's former personal attorney Michael Cohen will tell lawmakers this week that Trump asked him several times about a proposed skyscraper project in Moscow long after he secured the Republican presidential nomination, a person familiar with the matter told Reuters.

As Special Counsel Robert Mueller appears to be near the end of his probe into whether Russia meddled in the 2016 presidential election in collusion with Trump's campaign, Cohen's assertion that Trump was inquiring about the skyscraper project as late as June 2016, if true, would show Trump remained personally engaged in the venture well into his candidacy.

Cohen was set to offer lawmakers new information about Trump's private affairs over three consecutive days of in-depth discussion with congressional committee that began on Tuesday.

Cohen did not talk to reporters as he arrived on Capitol Hill on Tuesday morning for his first meeting, a closed-door hearing with the Senate Intelligence Committee.

That session will focus mainly on what Cohen knows about Trump and associates' dealings with Russia, as well as about Cohen's previous lying to Congress, two congressional sources said.

Cohen was one of Trump's closest aides and once said he would "take a bullet" for him, but he turned against his former boss last year and is cooperating with prosecutors after pleading guilty to tax evasion, bank fraud and campaign finance violations.

Cohen has said Trump directed him to make hush-money payments to two women who said they had sexual relationships with Trump, in violation of campaign finance laws before the 2016 election.

Trump called Cohen a "rat" after he turned on him, and the White House again attacked Cohen's credibility on Tuesday.

Cohen has been disbarred, according to a decision by a New York state appeals court in Manhattan released Tuesday and first reported by the New York Post. Disbarment is automatic in New York for lawyers convicted of felonies.

Michael Monico, a lawyer for Cohen, did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

"It's laughable that anyone would take a convicted liar like Cohen at his word, and pathetic to see him given yet another opportunity to spread his lies," White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders said.

Trump has denied any collusion took place between his campaign and Moscow. Russia denies U.S. intelligence agencies' assertions that it interfered in the election.

On Wednesday, in a public session before the House of Representatives Oversight Committee, Cohen intends to give lawmakers "granular details" about a hush-money payment to adult film actress Stephanie Clifford, known as Stormy Daniels, and information about a "money trail" after Trump became president, said the source familiar with the matter, who asked not to be identified.

Cohen will also offer new information on Trump's financial statements that "have never been produced before" relating to how Trump represented the values of his assets in financial transactions and other matters, the source said.

Cohen will also offer first-hand anecdotes to illustrate Trump's "lies, racism and cheating" during the decade Cohen worked for the real estate mogul and provide "evidence of criminal conduct" since he became president, the source said. REUTERS

Trump, Kim bet big on personal relationship at second summit

The president and North Korean leader meet on Wednesday for their second summit, betting that their personal relationship can break a stalemate.

Despite little progress toward his stated goal of ridding North Korea of its nuclear weapons since first meeting leader Kim Jong-un in Singapore last year, President Trump has said he is fully committed to his personal diplomacy with Kim.

Trump said late last year he and Kim “fell in love,” and on the eve of his departure for the second summit said they had developed “a very, very good relationship.” Whether the bonhomie can move them beyond summit pageantry to substantive progress on eliminating Pyongyang’s nuclear arsenal that threatens the United States is the question that will dominate their talks in the Vietnamese capital of Hanoi.

“This relationship is the biggest single driving force in crafting better relations,” said Harry J. Kazianis, director of Korea Studies, Center for the National Interest.

“Clearly, there needs to be a more solid foundation for dialogue than Kim and Trump. No two people alone have broad enough shoulders to take on the weight of such challenging issues spread out over 70 years.”

Trump will meet Kim for a brief one-on-one conversation on Wednesday evening, followed by a dinner, accompanied by two guests and interpreters, White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders told reporters on Air Force One.

They will hold “a series of back and forth” meetings on Thursday, she said.

In Singapore, they pledged to work toward denuclearization and permanent peace on the Korean peninsula. North and South Korea have been technically still at war since their 1950-53 conflict, with the Americans backing the South, ended in a truce, not a treaty.

The Singapore meeting — the first between a sitting U.S. president and a North Korean leader — ended with great fanfare but little substance over how to dismantle North Korea’s nuclear weapons and ballistic missiles.

Both sides are likely to feel pressure to agree on specific measures this time: what concrete steps North Korea will take to give up weapons that threaten the U.S. mainland, and what the United States will offer in return.

Many analysts believe North Korea won’t commit to significant disarmament unless punishing U.S.-led economic sanctions are eased.

Trump has held out the prospect of easing them if North Korea does something “meaningful.”

Any deal will face scrutiny from American lawmakers and others skeptical that North Korea is really willing to give up the cherished weapons it has long seen as its guarantee of national security, amid worry a compromise could undermine U.S. regional interests.

U.S. intelligence officials have said there is no sign Kim will ever give up his entire arsenal, and U.N. investigators say human rights have not improved in North Korea.

Trump scoffs at the doubters.

He has hailed the Singapore summit as a “tremendous success,” citing a freeze in North Korea’s nuclear and missile tests since late 2017, and has said the United States would have gone to war with North Korea if he had not been president.

Whatever the outcome, the summit should boost Kim’s bid to end his country’s pariah status and cement his place on the world stage. REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It’s Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it’s complex. In other words, it’s not a simple, easy fix.

But I’m sure you already know that. Or you wouldn’t be reading this.

That’s the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It’s amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can’t give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated ) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here’s What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what’s going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what’s going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I’m out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

MALE SUBWAY LEG & ARMS SPREADERS

I am so sick of these inconsiderate men on the subway. Not only will they knock you down to get a seat but they have their legs spread double wide to hold their huge backpacks between them. Now they have to spread their arms doublewide to look at their cellphones or they fold their arms sometimes elbowing me in the ribs. They have no consideration for others taking up 2 seats while paying for one. And when you say excuse me to try to have a seat, they look at you like you're from Mars. It's truly unbelievable!!! Have some consideration for others and try to close your legs and tuck in your arms. Or wouldn't it be even nicer to get up and let a lady have a seat sometimes?

STANDING AT CONCERTS

Why, at concerts, do people feel the need to stand (especially those in the front seats). Don't they have a good enough view? By standing, it causes a cascading effect, forcing EVERYONE to stand to see. It's frustrating to spend hundreds of dollars, only to have a great view of the posterior of the person in front of me. Also, when a concert is by a singer, why is the music SO LOUD that it drowns out the singer? People don't pay to hear the musicians; they pay for the singer, so let the star be heard.

"Family Food Showdown" premieres March 3. ANDERS KRUSBERG/FOOD NETWORK

Family food feud

"Family Food Showdown" premieres March 3 on Food Network.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Food Network's latest cooking competition series features a lot of talent, flavor and family dynamics. Valerie Bertinelli is hosting the delicious network's new competition "Family Food Showdown", and this show is unlike any that have aired on Food Network before.

The show centers around two families facing off in an intense three-round challenge where their culinary and communication skills are tested. Bertinelli chatted with Metro about how she was made to host this show, the heightened drama that comes with family teams and what surprises may be in store for contestants and audiences.

Bertinelli is no stranger to being in front of the camera. Many may recognize the actress from "One Day at a Time," "Hot in Cleveland" or from her hosting gigs on Food Network with "Valerie's Home Cooking" and the "Kids Baking Championships." Now the Delaware native is hosting a show that suits her as well as spaghetti suits meatballs.

"This is just a perfect part for me," Bertinelli said. "It speaks to who I am. It's how I learned to cook, it's how I got the passion for what I do now—through my family."

Testing the limits of family relationships is difficult enough; add a timed challenge, panel of judges and tv cameras and you've got a recipe for one intense competition show. "It definitely heightens the drama. You really see the family dynamics come out, and then when we get to the second round and all the surprises start happening—it truly does come out."

The surprises Bertinelli refers to are quite common with cooking competitions. Other notable shows throw in surprise ingredients, limit contestant's resources or have them come up with insane creations on the spot. It not only makes for a great show, but it also keeps everyone on their toes. "Family Food Showdown" is no different. Bertinelli says the surprises were so intense that she wanted to film another installment to the series before the first 13 episodes aired.

"I was hoping we could get another 13 in before anybody sees the show because what happens after the first round is really shocking for the families, so I don't want to give it away—but jaws dropped every single day."

Aside from Bertinelli hosting, there is an impressive panel of judges, some of whom return

"It definitely heightens the drama. You really see the family dynamics come out, and then when we get to the second round and all the surprises start happening—it truly does come out."

for multiple episodes in the series. Kardea Brown, Clinton Kelly, Antonia Lofaso, Daphne Oz, Jamika Pessoa, Christian Petroni and many more all appear on "Family Food Showdown" alongside Bertinelli and ultimately choose the fates of the culinary clad families.

"We get our judges coming back a few times, they are just really good at getting to the nitty gritty about why a dish works or why it doesn't without being hurtful—they're very compassionate. There's a lot of fun people who have come on and really know their stuff," says Bertinelli.

The first round of the competition requires families to cook a dish that symbolizes who they are as a family, this is not an easy task and Bertinelli knows that. When asked what dish she would cook for the first round the Food Network vet thought out loud, "Oh gosh, I don't know. Lasagna keeps coming to my head because that was the very first thing I learned how to cook—I think I was 9 or 10, but that speaks to me. It depends on which family members I'm with and how we would want to explain who our family is—it's not an easy task."

"Family Food Showdown" premieres on Food Network on March 3 at 8 p.m.

Mister Paradise

Opening a new bar in the East Village that feels immediately like it's been there all your life is possible. The ambitiously named Mister Paradise is all about revamping the classics: cocktails like a dirty martini made with shochu instead of vodka, served from behind a Mediterranean-tiled bar. Tuck into a booth inside the low-key glam dining room to enjoy upgraded favorites like housemade Hot Pockets, impressively crispy fried chicken and a burger that's basic yet anything but boring. Become a regular (or reserve in advance) and you'll get access to the Red Room in the back.

Gertie

Williamsburg's new "luncheonette and liquor bar" Gertie is the diner, deli and bar mashup you've always wanted. A team of native New Yorkers opened a bar of all the foods they love without the clichés, elevated by chef Will Edwards (Reynard). Almost everything is housemade, from the breads and spreads to the fermented tonics, accompanied by a rotisserie-centric menu from roast beef Reubens to gyros and finished with Italian ices. But the star is breakfast, served daily until 4 p.m. with heaving bialy sandwiches and fresh-baked pastries.

Open daily 8 a.m.-4 p.m., will expand to midnight when dinner launches, 58 Marcy Ave., gertie.nyc

Get familiar with contemporary Korean cuisine at o:n (pronounced "on") in NoMad, the latest spot from Japanese-Korean restaurant group Hand Hospitality (Her Name Is Han). A menu of appetizers like edamame pancakes and an "Asian fettuccini" with brisket is followed by a 30-minute hot pot experience. Each dish is simmered, steamed and boiled entirely on induction burners at each table ($35-$60) in an interactive ritual that's prized in Asian hospitality. As a seasonal restaurant, expect dishes to change. In a contemporary twist, instead of tea service there are tea-infused cocktails.

The Rooftop at Pier 17 just revealed its Summer Concert Series, including Lonely Island and Steve Miller Band.

eva.kis@metro.us

The Winterland ice rink on The Rooftop at Pier 17 is still up, but as one of the city's hottest concert venues, it's already looking ahead to warmer days with the reveal of its 2019 Summer Concert Series.

First up at the outdoor venue on the Lower Manhattan waterfront are indie-electronica band Passion Pit on their Manners 10th Anniversary Tour (May 19 & 21). Acts range from the Andy Samberg-fronted The Lonely Island (June 21) to emo rockers OneRepublic (July 20), alt-rock band Papa Roach (Aug.

11) and Beatles drummer Ringo Starr & His All Starr Band (Aug. 18).

This is just the first wave of concerts, which are organized by Live Nation, with more to be announced. Tickets are on sale now to Chase cardmembers through Ticketmaster; public presale begins today at 10 a.m. with code ROOFTOP, then March 1 for everyone.

A premium GA section is being added to the left of the stage called the Heineken Green Zone; the rest of the venue will be general admission. The venue can hold 3,400 for standing general admission shows and 2,400 seated.

Expect more news as Pier 17 continues to take shape as part of the Howard Hughes Corporation's $785 million redevelopment of the Seaport District.

Before and after the shows, expect more food options on Pier 17 in addition to the Heineken River Deck bar at the edge of the pier at the quick-service Fresh Market Hall eatery. First up is Jean-Georges Vongerichten's seafood-centric food hall, expected to open this summer.

Take The Foot Health Checkup

- My toenails are streaked, discolored and thickened.
- The sides of my toenails dig into the skin and hurt.
- I have a large lump behind my big toe (or little toe) which is always red.
- I get an extremely painful "cramp" in the area of my third and fourth toes when wearing shoes.
- My toes aren't straight- they are all cocked-up, bent and hurt.
- I have painful calluses on the ball of my foot which keep building up.
- I have corns on my toes which get thick no matter what shoe size I wear.
- The bottoms of my feet hurt all day, but it's worse when I step out of bed in the morning.
- I have cramps in my legs which always happen when I walk the same distance.
- My ankles are swollen most of the time.
- My feet are always dry and itchy - sometimes they itch.
- My feet just hurt all over when I stand or walk a lot.
- I have numbness, burning, infection, persistent pain, skin rash, or open sores.

HOME

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

As San Francisco's cool, hip neighbor, Oakland may offer slightly more affordable home prices, but they're still jaw-droppingly expensive by most standards. According to Zillow, the median home value is $741,900.

James Edmondson, 31, who runs a type-design company, and Sadie Fenton, 35, a restaurant server, experienced the competitive housing market while scrambling to buy a home in Oakland last year before their daughter was born.

Edmondson shared the intense ups and downs of their homebuying journey, from exceeding their initial budget by more than $300,000 to finally landing their two-bedroom home in the Glenview area of Oakland. (This transcript has been lightly edited for clarity and length.)

What brought you to Oakland?

Sadie was born in San Francisco, and I was born near San Luis Obispo, California. I moved to San Francisco when I was 19 and eventually transferred to an art school in Oakland.

Why did you decide to buy a home in Oakland?

We had been renting in San Francisco and generally felt that landlords could throw us out at a certain point. That uncertainty and dependence on landlords became less and less attractive. Some people say that renting is like throwing away money, which I don't believe — you're paying for a valuable service — but we were thinking about starting a family and wanted to give homebuying a shot.

What were you looking for in a home?

I wanted a garage space, and Sadie wanted a formal dining area. We wanted a good neighborhood and to be close to shops and restaurants. I didn't want to leave the city vibe altogether. We months to find a home.

We knew we weren't going to get a great deal; the competition was so thick. It didn't seem like we were going to stumble on some bargain. We looked at close to 20 houses in person and spent so much time browsing on Redfin — it took up our whole lives. We put in an offer on one house in San Leandro, but we weren't even close to getting it. The same thing happened for another house in San Leandro. We were off by $100K. Losing those two offers was a reality check. We needed to be real with ourselves and understand that this was a ludicrous market.

were flexible on the rest because we knew we had incredible competition in this market, especially at the time we were looking.

What was your home-buying journey like?

We called our real estate agent at the beginning of 2018. We didn't search very seriously the first month, but Sadie was pregnant and our due date was May 23, so that was our deadline. It ended up taking us around three

What's your approach to finance, and how did you save for the home?

I'm a saver. Coming into this, I had a healthy retirement account and started saving when I was 19, but I've since learned about the FIRE movement, and now my goal is to be mortgage-free in 10 years. I don't care about clothes, cars, eating out or going to bars, so that helped.

Our budget was initially in the mid-$600,000 range, but everything was 10-20% over asking price. We were faced with the reality that we'd have to stretch to make it work. It eventually went all the way up to $982,000, which is what we ended up paying. Sadie and I both had savings, but we also had to borrow $55,000 from my older brothers, which ended up being around 18% of the down payment. We put down around $300K, which we had saved up.

Here's what homeowners must remember at tax time this year

Homeownership traditionally comes with some great tax breaks, but lots of things are different this year due to new tax rules. Here are four things that could put a wrinkle in your tax return this filing season if you're a homeowner.

1. The mortgage interest deduction is different

Mortgage interest is tax-deductible, but this year the deduction has been adjusted. The deduction is limited to interest on up to $750,000 of debt ($375,000 if you're married filing separately) instead of $1 million of debt ($500,000 if married filing separately).

The key date here is Dec. 15, 2017. If you took out your mortgage before then, the rule change likely doesn't affect you, according to Ruthann Woll, a certified public accountant and partner at RKL LLP in Wyomissing, Pennsylvania. There's an exception for people who were under contract to buy a home before Dec. 15, 2017, as long as they were scheduled to close by Jan. 1, 2018.

Also, the law treats refinanced mortgages as if they originated on the old loan's date, which means the old limit of $1 million still applies. (If you refinance to borrow more than your current mortgage balance, different rules may apply, though.)

2. The property tax deduction is now capped

Property taxes are generally still tax-deductible, but this year the deduction is subject to a total cap of $10,000, which includes property taxes plus state and local income taxes or sales taxes paid during the year ($5,000 if married filing separately).

"That's, obviously, huge for everybody, especially wage earners who have high state and local taxes to begin with," Woll says.

3. The HELOC deduction has new rules

New rules around home equity lines of credit, or HELOCs, can affect whether the interest on those loans is tax-deductible. Now you can deduct HELOC interest only if you used the HELOC money "to buy, build or substantially improve the taxpayer's home that secures the loan," according to the IRS. In other words, if you used the money to improve your house, you can probably deduct the interest.

"But if you're using that line to pay off personal expenses, like credit cards or things like that, then you can't deduct it," Woll warns.

4. Moving expenses aren't deductible for most anymore

Under the old tax rules, you may have been able to deduct the cost of moving. But under the new tax rules, moving-expense deductions are largely limited to military members.

"If you're on active duty, or if it's a move pursuant to a military order, change of station, then those deductions are allowed," Woll reminds homeowners.

A word about itemizing this year: Although many tax deductions associated with homeownership are still around this filing season, you might decide not to take any of them. Woll says financially it may not be worth it.

That's because something else happened to the tax rules in 2018: The standard deduction increased dramatically to $12,000 for single filers and $24,000 for joint filers. The effect is that a married couple filing jointly would probably need to have more than $24,000 in itemized deductions — those related to owning a home and any others as well — in order to make itemizing the better route financially. And so, many people might save more money (and time) this year by scrapping the itemized deductions for mortgage interest, property taxes and all the rest and just taking the standard deduction.

Mets injury jinx continues, Frazier joins Lowrie on shelf

The Mets third-base depth has already taken a hit this spring.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

A new year hasn't done much to change the luck of the New York Mets when it comes to injuries.

The Mets announced on Tuesday that veteran infielder Todd Frazier strained his left oblique and will be flying back to New York to receive a cortisone shot. While it is not believed to be a major injury, there is no timetable on when he will rejoin the team back at spring training down in Florida.

"I was hitting the ball great and at the end, I just felt a little tightness in my left side," Frazier said. "It's a new injury, just something I have to deal with... Not the best thing, but luckily it happened in spring training and we can nip this in the bud."

"I thought I was doing everything right," he continued. "It's just one of those things that happen, I guess. But it's frustrating. I'm very frustrated with myself."

It's already the second injury to a third baseman encountered by the Mets this spring, which has cut into its infield depth. Newly-acquired Jed Lowrie, who signed a two-year, $20 million contract this winter, is questionable for Opening Day after suffering a knee sprain.

Lowrie had played in at least 150 games in each of the last two seasons, suggesting that some past injury woes were firmly behind him. He played in a combined 156 games from 2015-2016.

The injury bug continues to follow Frazier since he moved to Queens prior to the 2018 season. Having never hit the disabled list in his first six MLB seasons with the Cincinnati Reds, Chicago White Sox, and New York Yankees, the 33-year-old went on two-separate DL stints during his first year with the Mets last year, limiting him to just 115 games. He hit 18 home runs with 58 RBI, his worst statistical season when playing in more than 100 games.

Both Lowrie and Frazier were expected to be entrenched in a battle for the starting third-base role this season, forcing Jeff McNeil to split time as a utility infielder and outfielder despite his strong showing during his rookie campaign in 2018.

Initial projections had Lowrie taking over the hot corner while Frazier started the season at first base until highly-touted prospect Peter Alonso was called up.

Now with no set return for either of the third-base favorites, McNeil is poised to be the starter while the likes of Adeiny Hechavarria, J.D. Davis, TJ Rivera, and Luis Guillorme challenge for playing time down in Port St. Lucie.

Aaron Hicks extension opens options for Yankees

The New York Yankees secured switch-hitting center fielder Aaron Hicks for the long-haul, inking the 29-year-old to a seven-year, $70 million extension on Monday, keeping him under team control through the 2026 season.

It's a long-term deal that provides plenty of questions considering the Yankees are committing themselves to a veteran that is coming off the lone stellar season of his career. In his sixth professional season, Hicks mashed 27 home runs with 79 RBI with an .833 OPS. He had never hit more than 15 home runs or driven in more than 52 runs prior, though he had only played more than 100 games in a season just once before.

The decision to extend Hicks has drawn comparisons of past Yankees deals for switch-hitting center fielders. Fans will obviously hope that this decision replicates the deal given to Bernie

Williams in 1998. George Steinbrenner gave Williams a seven-year, $87.5 million deal prior to the 1999 season, securing a centerpiece of two more World Series-winning teams.

On the opposite end of the spectrum lays the Jacob Ellsbury deal, as the Yankees agreed to terms on a seven-year, $153 million contract in prior to the 2014 season. Since then, he's appeared in just 520 games while slashing .264/.330/.386 with 39 home runs and 198 RBI while the Yankees continue to look for ways to ship him out of town.

Given Hicks' standing in the lineup where he'll receive plenty of protection from the likes of Giancarlo Stanton and Aaron Judge, there is a better chance the next few years will resemble more of Williams' tenure rather than Ellsbury's.

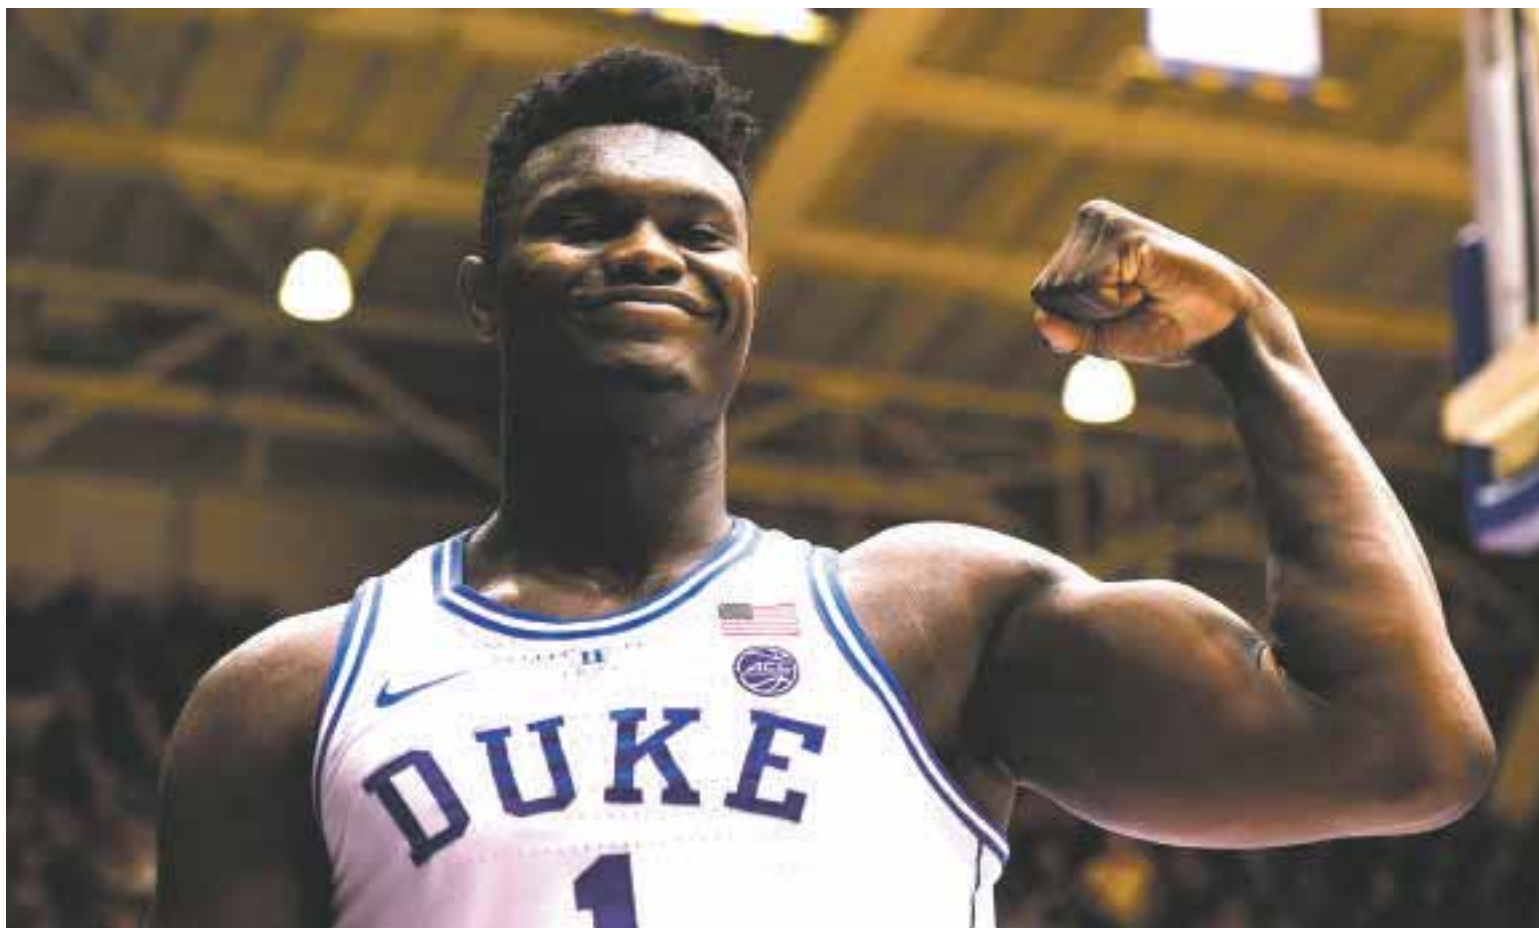

While the verdict of the deal will not be fully out for a few seasons, the Yankees have done more than enough to protect themselves. If Hicks continues to produce as he did in 2018, paying an annual average salary of $10 million for that kind of production is an absolute bargain. For an additional seven home runs and 21 RBI, Bryce Harper is set to make triple that mark in his next deal, whenever that may come.

A successful Hicks will quickly make the likes of Estevan Florial and Clint Frazier, two of the organization's top outfield prospects, expendable, as first noted by Joel Sherman of the New York Post. It would allow the Yankees to build an impressive trade package as early as this year's trade deadline for a top-tier starting pitcher should the rotation struggle in 2019.

The Yankees were linked to perennial Cy Young candidate Corey Kluber during the offseason, who will be featured on a Cleveland Indians team that is expected to take a step back in the AL Central this year. If they're going nowhere and find it essential to replenish the farm system, the Yankees would be a prime trade partner. The Indians would get two promising talents while the Yankees get an undisputed ace ahead of another likely postseason run.

Should Hicks struggle, however, it's more likely both are held on to in order to provide a potential upgrade. JOE PANTORNO

ZION DECISION TO KEEP PLAYING A GOOD ONE

OPINION

@marcmalusis

To play or not to play.

The debate rages on across the country when it comes to Duke super freshman Zion Williamson. After suffering a right knee sprain last week at Cameron Indoor Stadium, just 36 seconds into their matchup against archrival North Carolina, many have jumped into the debate and speculated what Williamson should do.

You know what the Knicks and other lottery teams want him to do. Shut it down! Right? They are thinking about themselves and Zion needs to think about himself.

Following Saturday night's Zion-less Duke victory over Syracuse at the Carrier Dome, Blue Devils head coach Mike Krzyzewski said Zion Williamson "wants to play and will return to Duke."

I totally get it and it makes sense. Take the entire college experience in before taking your talents to the next level. But the decision does not end the debate, because now people will question whether or not that was the correct decision.

Williamson was the No. 2 overall prospect from Spartanburg Day High School before he committed to attend Duke. He is widely regarded as the best NBA prospect and the No. 1 Draft choice in June's draft.

He has dominated the college and sports landscape since making his debut on Nov. 6, which was a 34-point victory over Kentucky in which Williamson scored 28 points. His tenacious play on both ends, offensively and defensively, draws your eye to him unlike any other college freshman in quite some time. Some have compared him to Charles Barkley and some to Larry Johnson, which is an impressive duo to be compared to, but he is quite simply Zion.

He has helped make Duke probably the most exciting basketball watch, college or pro, this season. No doubt, Coach K has a loaded team and Williamson has a pair of freshman teammates in RJ Barrett and Cam Reddish that are no slouches in their own right. Both have NBA aspirations and are both future "big time" pros.

With a healthy Williamson, Duke is the 2-1 favorite to cut down the nets in Minneapolis and win the national championship come April. Without Williamson, I think that would bring others squarely into the mix.

As Duke announced that Williamson will be evaluated day-to-day with a Grade 1 right knee sprain, a result of his Nike PG 2.5 splitting at the seam on his left foot, all the debate has raged on since. Think about this for a second. Nike lost $1.1 billion of stock value in trading after the structural failure of its sneaker and the injury to Williamson.

Now, as the Nike stock dipped, people are looking to provide the proper insight for Williamson. What should he do?

There is no easy answer. I don't want to hear how the NCAA is unfair and Williamson and other athletes should be getting paid. I don't disagree, it is not a fair system and it is tilted in the wrong direction. But it is the system that is in play today and it is not changing tomorrow.

Yes, college athletes should get paid and they do put their bodies at risk, but they can also take out insurance policies on themselves as well should they suffer a catastrophic injury. They also do get an education that they can go back and complete should they decide to leave early for the NBA. I know it is not enough, but that is a different column for a different day.

After all, Williamson could have gone over and played in Europe, like Brandon Jennings. Starting this summer, the G League will also offer contracts worth $125,000 to elite prospects who are at least 18 years old and don't want to pursue the college route.

Of course, one could argue that Williamson should shut it down and think about his future and his body. You could, but hasn't he already cemented his status as the best NBA prospect in the draft?

Maybe it costs him a spot or two, but at worst he would probably be the third-overall pick if he suffered, say, a torn ACL.

You want an example? Here is one in recent memory: The New Orleans Pelicans selected Kentucky center Nerlens Noel with the sixth-overall pick in the 2013 NBA Draft. His rights were later traded to the Philadelphia 76ers and he did not begin his professional career until the following season, sitting out his entire initial season recovering from knee surgery. Maybe it cost Noel a couple of spots in the draft, but the knee injury did not cost him his career by any stretch.

Charles Barkley said the other night on TNT, "That is what we do, we play basketball."

He referenced many former stars who excelled on the college level and then went on to superstardom in the NBA, and that is what Zion has decided to do.

Selfishly, I am a happy college hoops fan because I get to watch his thunderous dunks in a Duke uniform again. We will all get to see the best show in hoops again. As Barkley said, "We play basketball," and Zion has decided that he will play for Duke again. He made the right decision because that was the right decision for him, which makes it the correct choice. It is that simple. Good for Zion and good for all of us.
